

Abstract

In this research, we presented a new integral transform called (novel integral transform NIT) similar to the Laplace transform and discussed some of its theorems and some of its properties and its duality to other transforms . this was in the first chapter. In the second chapter we presented some examples that we solved using this transformation and in the third chapter we solved system of ordinary differential equations using the (NIT)