Abstract:

In this project, a numerical method called the weighted residuel((least square method)), which is used here in this project,which is characterized by its reliability and ability to reach approximate results, which is usually largely close to the exact solution, and the study of the numerical process by solving some examples for linear differential equation,the results confirm the effective this method for to reach the solution close to the exact solution