

In this project we study the solution of non linear ordinary differential equation first and second order using A domian decomposition method [ADM].It is one of the important analytical methods and effective to find result more accurately than numerical methods and that is method is used in many modern research .A physical application has been used and the results showed that the inner way in our project is the best and more than accuracy of the numerical results of the same . problem