

Abstract

In this project we use A domain method which is a well – known method for solving linear differential equation ordinary some examples are presented for compare with numerical method and shown the result that gets from this method more than effective and accurate .than the numerical way